Youth Musical, Time Will Tell, Artfully Presents Past, Present

by Kyla Hanington

Time Will Tell, Greenbelt's Youth Winter Musical 2018 offering, is a trip back in time. Part of the ongoing events celebrating Greenbelt's 80th anniversary, the musical showcases both songs from 1936 to 1939 and the multi-talented young people who live in Greenbelt today.

The story, written and directed by Christopher Cherry, tells of a group of drama students at the new Greenbelt High School in 1937 and captures the spirit of idealism and hope in the brand new town. Cherry explained that the themes of the Greenbelt anniversary events, such as the Youth Winter Musical, are

ERHS Lady Raiders On Track To Be 2018 State Champions

by Patrick Gleason

Eighteen points flashed on the scoreboard for the Eleanor Roosevelt Lady Raiders before the Parkdale Panthers registered a single point. Although Parkdale had been Roosevelt's stiffest county competition this season, the Lady Raiders were never seriously threatened after their torrid start. Roosevelt's pressure defense forced the Panthers into a slew of early turnovers, leading to easy baskets on the offensive end thanks to the height of junior center DJ McFarlane and smooth shooting senior guard Leah Mayo. While the Panthers made a few runs to energize their fans, the only thing more consistent than the Raiders' lead was the smile on senior guard Ashia McCalla's face. Whether she made a jumper or committed a foul, the Lady Raiders' leading scorer constantly flashed a smile – and with reason, as she led the team in its next step along the road to a possible first state championship since 2015.

McCalla and senior forward Nia Scott are the only players on the current roster to have earned a state title. The team will play Charles County's North Point on March 8 at Towson's SECU Arena in the state semi-finals. A victory in this game will bring Coach Delton Fuller a chance at his third state championship on Saturday at 3 p.m. Before blitzing Parkdale for the region championship, the Lady Raiders downed the Oxon Hill Clippers 55-46 for the county championship on February 22.

Greenbelt Weathers Nor'easter: Officials Respond Effectively

by Gary Childs

Along with much of the east coast, Greenbelt was pummeled by a major windstorm over the past weekend. The storm, a nor'easter, blew tropical storm force winds gusting up to 65 miles per hour according to the Washington Post meteorological team, the Capital Weather Gang. Widespread power outages were reported across the region. As of 9:30 p.m. Friday according to the Pepco website, 17 Greenbelt homes had lost power. Because of power issues caused by the storm, the Old Greenbelt Theatre cancelled its Friday afternoon movie and the Greenbelt Arts Center postponed the opening night of its current production. According to Police Public Information Liaison George Mathews, Greenbelt police were kept extremely busy all day managing traffic control issues, especially along the Greenbelt Road corridor, due to traffic signals not working because of storm-related electricity problems.

Parks Superintendant Brian Townsend said that his team started their work before the storm even arrived. On Thursday, Public Works crews staged equipment they would likely need to handle any damage wrought by the storm. On Friday, while responding to requests for help dealing with fallen trees and large, dangerous branches, crews also cruised around Greenbelt, proactively watching for potential issues needing attention. Townsend said that as of Monday, 23 trees on city property had been blown over by the high winds. Crews worked late Friday and all day Saturday, cleaning up tree debris.

According to George Bachman, director of maintenance for GHI, 18 trees on GHI property were lost due to the storm. As of Tuesday, GHI crews were still working to clean up storm-related damage. Bachman said that GHI

Artist's Exhibit of Oil Portraits Tells Stories at New Deal Café

by Melissa Sites

Spiritual allegory meets modern family in some of the pictures at the New Deal Café exhibit of Amanda Demos Larsen's work this season. In one of her self-portraits, He Did Eat, Larsen veils her gaze and holds a sharp knife while handing her spouse a slice of apple. In another, Afraid to Look, Larsen shows herself bending over to remove her shoes, with small toys scattered around her feet. "It's like Moses, holy ground," she said.

portraits, evidence of her life-long fascination with face and form. Seven are smaller paintings, painted over the last six months, and are intended to be viewed together as a series. The show is sponsored by Friends of New Deal Café Arts (FONDCA), a non-profit organization that promotes visual, performing and literary arts.

Larsen creates oil paintings with a luminous, buttery surface. Working in oils allows Larsen to paint in layers, overpainting to build depth in skin tones and to draw light down into the paint. The empty backgrounds in Larsen's paintings glow, enhancing the sense of movement and life around the figures. Larsen was inspired by a Rubens sketch to paint her subjects looking upward, and most look away from the viewer, poised to do or say something. While her paintings are not necessarily narrative, Larsen's work conveys the idea of a story in progress, with figures staged in a minimalist tableau, surrounded by open space. As Larsen states, her subjects are caught in the midst of a transformative experience,

Letters to the Editor

Is Volleyball Going To the Dogs?

I was pleased to read in the February 8 issue of the News Review that the city council is seriously considering various locations for a Greenbelt dog park. However, I was dismayed to see Greenbelt's sand volleyball court listed as one of those options. That spot is already in vibrant use – as a volleyball court! I am aware of one group alone that uses it three times a week in the summer, and another that uses it twice during the weekend. Rather than slating it for apparent re-purposing, I would advocate that the court be better maintained for its current purpose. The net is pretty tattered and could use replacement, for example. Perhaps the sand level could be checked and replenished. Or, as an improvement, more than one group has voiced, among themselves, a wish that night lights be made available for it, even on a pay-by-use basis, similar to the neighboring tennis courts lighting system.

Does anyone know why this court was considered for re-purposing as a dog park? Is the city still willing to maintain it? I am pleased that it did not make the narrower list of options for a dog park, but it concerns me that it ever made the initial list to start with.

SCMaglev Event Thanks to All

We would like to thank everyone who attended the March 3 SCMaglev train project opposition event organized by Greenbelt Advocates for Environmental and Social Justice. We are happy this event brought together so many residents from different areas of Greenbelt. We are also happy that people from other communities impacted by the project came to unite with us. Several elected officials and activists spoke at the event and attendees appreciated their informative talks. We appreciate the help of activists who set up community information tables.

We all want to stop the project from harming our communities. We care about our homes and the environment and do not want to see either adversely impacted by the project. Many people who attended the event took action by signing our petition asking our elected federal and state officials to adopt the No Build Alternative. People also wrote letters expressing their reasons for opposing the project. Over 160 people attended the event. We collected 105 letters and 126 people signed our petition.

To those volunteers who worked our sign-in table, we would like to say your help was much appreciated. A big thank you to Greenbriar resident Missy Dodd. She helped us navigate the process for securing the Greenbriar Community Center and helped with set-up and clean-up of the room. She also created a flyer to help get the word out. Between our ad in the News Review and her flyer, we were able to reach a lot of people. Thank you to Greenbriar staff for their help in getting the word out and letting us hold our event at their wonderful community building. Greenbelt Advocates will continue to work for our community and those communities impacted by the project. We will soon be on Facebook, but until then please continue to contact us at greenbeltadvocates.esj@gmail.com.

Fish Story

For those of us who read Robert Snyder's letter of February 15 entitled Maglev Support and thought it sounded fishy, we were right. It was loaded with a string of red herrings. Those of us who lived here during the construction of the Capital Beltway and Metrorail remember that both were welcomed here by most residents, knowing that they would be able to easily travel to all parts of the metro area once these projects were completed. There were no rallies, demonstrations or even angry letters in the Washington Post or local newspapers. All of us who live here now use both of these resources on a regular basis and are glad they were built.

Most who live in Prince George's County work, shop, pray and play in the metro area. Why would any of us get on a train going to Baltimore or New York, except for a few leisure activities several times a year if we could even afford the tickets? Passengers on the maglev will be mostly from out of state or from abroad offering no benefit to those of us who live here. For those who travel long distances to work, please consider moving instead of bringing your travel woes to our doorstep.

The thousands of new jobs created to build the system will be low-paying, temporary jobs, which will be of little interest to local residents. Workers' wages would be sent back home instead of being spent here for homes, cars, goods and services.

Snyder brought up green energy. Since when is electricity green energy, when little of it is produced by wind and solar? The only way the train could be considered green is if solar panels

Girl Scouts Collecting Books for Homeless

Greenbelt Brownie Troop 23007 is collecting gently used children’s books to donate to an area shelter focused on assisting homeless mothers with children. United Communities Against Poverty (UCAP), located in Capitol Heights, provides a variety of services for mothers with young children who are homeless, including operating a shelter that provides child care and after-school care for the children.

“How wonderful!” said Sharon Westman, UCAP donation coordinator. “We are forming a library for our residents, with special focus on children’s books for our child-care and after-care center.” The second- and third-grade Brownies decided to support the shelter as part of this year’s Girl Scout Journey, during which they have read stories about girls around the world who struggle with reading because they lack access to books.

“I am glad to help the children at the shelter,” said troop member Brooklyn. “I struggled with reading and now I’m above grade level. I want to help them become better readers too.” But many children in the Washington, D.C., area lack access to books. The UCAP child-care and after-care programs serve children from newborns to age 12 (7th grade) including just a few older girls, so that is the focus of the girls’ book drive. As troop member Kira explained, “I’ve been reading all my life, and it makes me happy to help these children have the same experience.”

To donate children’s books, contact Holly Wheeler, troop leader, by March 25 at GSTroop23007@gmail.com.

ERHS Boys Run at State Championship Falls Short

by Patrick Gleason

Senior Captain Juston Bailey locks in on defense.

Although the Roosevelt boys squad has finally bowed out of the state tournament, Coach Brendan O’Connell’s team delivered a thrilling week of basketball. Led by a formidable set of guards, the Raiders overcame a 22-point deficit to defeat their archrival Bowie Bulldogs in their playoff opener. The Raiders entered the game with two wins over the Bulldogs this season, but Bowie’s lead surged into the third quarter amid a barrage of three-pointers. The tide turned as Roosevelt forced the Bulldogs into turnovers, highlighted by an emphatic transition dunk by senior Jaden Faulkner that elicited an eruption from the packed home crowd. Juston Bailey’s three free throws capped off the Raiders’ comeback. It was Bailey’s leadership that willed the Raiders to victory two nights later as Roosevelt visited the county champion Wise Pumas – one of only two county teams to defeat the Raiders this season. After sprinting to an 18-2 lead, Roosevelt appeared ready to avenge last year’s season-ending loss but Wise slowly climbed its way back in. After the Pumas regained the lead junior Cameron Brown knocked down a huge three-pointer to resuscitate the Raiders. Wise’s Sherwyn Devonish nailed a three-pointer at the buzzer to send the game into overtime. Between Bailey’s will and junior guard Isaiah Gross’ grit, the Raiders ended the game on a 13-0 run, exiting the gym with skips of adolescent exuberance.

In the region final against the Bladensburg Mustangs, the Raiders finally ran out of comebacks, although their performance didn’t lack in excitement. Trailing by nine with just over 50 seconds remaining, the Raiders forced multiple turnovers and pulled to within two after a patented three-point play from Gross. After a missed Mustang free throw, Faulkner drove the length of the court, just missing a chance to send the game to overtime. Time had finally run out on their season, but the Raiders’ performance didn’t lack in the effort and heart they exhibited throughout another impressive season as a team that annually contends for the state championship.

Nearly $12K in Grant Funds Allocated to ACE Schools

by Beverly Palau

Earlier this year, the Greenbelt City Council approved the recommendations of the Greenbelt Advisory Committee on Education (ACE) to provide $11,757.62 in grants to six neighborhood schools, funding 24 different educational projects. The ACE Grants program, which has been in existence since 2009, supports activities that enhance or enrich school-based activities. This year 44 project sponsors submitted applications. Programs that were awarded funding range from purchasing items such as French reading books, dry erase boards and a school double bass for the orchestra, funding for an animation program and a Lego League in Hydro-Dynamics.

“This was a very good year for proposals. We got a lot of strong proposals...more than we have in previous years,” stated long-time ACE member Jon Gardner. The ACE committee rated each proposal on intrinsic merit, budget, benefit to students and the proposal format.

Greenbelt ACE is appointed by city council and focuses on seven core schools that serve Greenbelt students: Greenbelt, Springhill Lake and Magnolia Elementary Schools; Dora Kennedy French Immersion; Greenbelt Middle School; Turning Point Academy; and Eleanor Roosevelt High School. All schools except for Turning Point Academy submitted proposals this year. There was quite a bit of diversity in the programs that were selected for funding. A full list of the grants and a description of all submitted proposals is available at greenbeltmd.gov/AgendaCenter/ViewFile/Item/3410?fileID=3628.

In addition to the annual grants, ACE operates Reading Clubs at Springhill Lake Elementary School, Greenbelt Middle School and, until recently, Magnolia Elementary School. The Magnolia program has been taken over by teachers at that school. They also annually recognize outstanding educators and students from each of the seven schools and provide small scholarships to the high school recipients. ACE stays in close touch with school officials, Parent-Teacher Associations and students to make sure that they are in tune with the needs of Greenbelt’s students. Through ACE, the city has provided thousands of dollars of educational support to Greenbelt’s students for many years. To find out more about ACE, visit md-greenbelt.civicplus.com/index.aspx?nid=145.

Condolences to Hopi Auerbach and her sister Jennine on the death of their mother, Mary Auerbach, on March 5. A memorial service will be held later.

A resident of Franklin Park, Hakim was a teacher at the M&M Learning Center in College Park, where he was in charge of the Quran and Islamic Studies programs. A GoFundMe website has been set up for the funeral service.

Congratulations to ERHS graduate Jan Knutson who landed a job as a jazz guitarist with the U.S. Army Band “Pershing’s Own.” He will start full-time in June.

Farmers Market Contributors Celebrate Community Spirit

by Cathie Meetre

On Saturday evening, February 10, the Greenbelt Farmers Market (GFM) held its annual appreciation party. Over 30 marketeers attended to sample a delicious collation put on by the GFM board as a thank you to all those who have given so generously to the market as volunteers, donors and buskers. A busker is a musician who is unpaid but accepts donations from listeners – the word is derived from the Spanish ‘buscar’, which means ‘to seek.’

Mayor Emmett Jordan attended and explained that though a chunk of the market’s four-hour stint competes unsuccessfully with his passion for Sunday tennis, he enjoys helping take down, pack up and move the market’s equipment back to its storage location under the pool. He promised to be back next season (starting Mothers’ Day, May 13).

Market Master Nancy Solomon was there to herald another season of well-organized, sympathetically-run markets. She proudly announced that her friend, GFM volunteer Harry Schomberg, had mended the market’s most compromised tent – sparing the market the not inconsiderable expense of a new one. Three cheers for Harry! Solomon’s genial but firm guidance on market days is a significant factor in attracting and keeping good vendors and, as all well-trained volunteers know, the contents of the storage boxes should be predictable and a tent is not to be taken down when people are beneath it.

The Greenbelt busker community was ably represented by Anne and Jon Gardner of Transatlantic Crossing, the Gardner family band that has played several times at the market. Multitalented flutist Naomi Littlefield was also there, displaying culinary capabilities with a delicious home-made hummus and pita platter. She notes that adding a clove of garlic to her hummus gives it that extra special something. GFM’s buskers add a delightful dimension – acoustic music played informally in the open air ideally complements the home-grown and locally-based ethos of the market.

One volunteer remarked that being involved in the market has helped her meet neighbors and make friends back in her own GHI court, and that being a volunteer has helped her integrate herself into Greenbelt life, in one season, more than mere residential proximity has in far longer. Other attendees fell into conversation about their respective research projects, for example, how USDA projects at the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center relate to providing ground truth for satellite remote sensing measurements conducted by NASA Goddard. An eavesdropper might have remarked that though the attendees shared much in common, not the least being a fondness for fresh produce, they yet brought many different perspectives and backgrounds to their common service.

Volunteering for the market is easy and flexible. Some are occasional volunteers according to their schedule, others sign up for a regular activity. Tasks may be at the market itself or to provide support during other hours, and service hours are available to students. The GFM website offers forms for prospective volunteers and a donate button for PayPal contributions. Musicians (usually acoustic or possibly very mildly amplified) are encouraged to contact the market to schedule a visit. Visit Greenbeltfarmersmarket.org for more information.

“looking for something, responding to a sound, seeing something for the first time or having spiritual awakenings –sometimes all at the same time.”

Larsen’s work has a clean, contemporary feel, conveying effortless mastery in reproducing a likeness. Larsen uses photographs as preparatory studies for her portraits, which results in a neat blend of realism with allegorical elements. For example, the portrait of Beth features a small tree in the background which pulls the gaze deep into the painting as the subject looks off in a different direction. In one of four self-portraits, the artist wears a flowered dress and faces completely away from the viewer, presenting a decorative surface full of light and action.

Larsen earned a Master of Fine Arts degree at the prestigious Pratt Institute in Brooklyn, where she lived for six years before following her sister and mother to Greenbelt, an area whose lively art scene attracts visual and performing artists. Larsen appreciates the arts community in Greenbelt, stating that, “The Brooklyn arts community is huge, but the Greenbelt community is small enough yet active enough that you can really be part of it.” Larsen works as an Arts Education Specialist for the Greenbelt Recreation Department, where she recently organized a series of Art Shares, a venue in which artists can come together for conversation, critique and inspiration.

Founded in 2002, FONDCA sponsors art shows and receptions at the New Deal Café, supported by donations from local businesses, organizations and individuals. As FONDCA Arts Coordinator, Christine Wilkin arranges shows and receptions and helps artists hang their work. Shows at the Café change around every two months, offering many artists the chance to show and sell their work.

Council Reviews Proposed 2018 Maryland Legislation

by Kathleen Gallagher

This time of year is not only about rain and snow and power outages. It's also about lots of proposed legislation. The Maryland General Assembly is in session and has introduced more than 3,000 bills, with few of them having come to any resolution so far. Throughout the session, the Greenbelt City Council considers selected bills and decides whether to express active support or opposition to any of them. The following bills are among the ones discussed at council's last two regular meetings.

SB 277/HB 372

At its February 26 meeting, council unanimously supported the Maryland Metro Funding Act, which would create a dedicated funding account for WMATA capital costs and provide an annual grant of at least $125 million. Virginia and D.C. would have to enact similar legislation for the plan to move forward.

HB 538/SB 651

Council unanimously supported this legislation to prohibit the sale and use of expanded polystyrene food service containers statewide. Use of these products in Prince George's County has been banned since 2016. The Greenbelt Climate Action Network (GCAN) asked the city to support the bill.

HB 1209

Council unanimously supported this bill to modify the Silver Alert Program to clarify that a Silver Alert can be issued regardless of whether a missing person is in a vehicle or on foot.

SB 1188/HB 1767

Council unanimously agreed to oppose a bill to revise state law regarding the permitting and siting of wireless facilities. The bill is directed at small-cell wireless. The city's objection at this time is that the bill would weaken municipal authority over its own rights-of-way, while also undercutting a local government's ability to manage its own permitting process.

Resident Jeff Harrison, representing a coalition of local community groups, asked the city council to support a bill called the Safe Act, "Supporting All Families Everywhere," which is a revision and resubmission of a bill called the "Community Trust Act," which was supported last year by the House of Delegates but not the State Senate.

This year's bill is sponsored by all three of Greenbelt's State Delegates (Healey, Gaines and Washington). It would provide that officials of state or local government be immune from criminal and civil liability for refusing to provide specific types of information to the federal government or other states regarding immigration and customs enforcement. Greenbelt supported the bill last year.

Since this bill was presented at the meeting, council decided to take more time to review it and possibly discuss it with the city's state delegation at the upcoming legislative dinner.

The following bills were among those considered at council's February 12 meeting.

HB 637/SB 1004

HB 638/ SB 1005

Council unanimously supported these two sets of bills, which would establish authority for counties and municipalities regarding transfer of county assets for development of a maglev train system.

HB 1742

Councilmember Judith Davis asked to add to the list this bill requiring county approval for the location of a maglev train within its jurisdiction. The Maryland Municipal League is supporting this bill conditional on its amendment to include municipal approval. Council supported it unanimously with the same condition.

As it has in the past, council unanimously supported this bill allowing Prince George's County to prohibit the use of disposable plastic bags. The law would not apply to some types of uses.

HB 423

Council supported this bill to require electric companies to provide notice to municipalities before providing vegetation management.

HB 201/SB 518

Council did not support a bill that would allow AMC Theatres at Beltway Plaza and at a location in Oxon Hill to hold a liquor license, but councilmembers were divided regarding whether to take a formal position of "no position" or to oppose the bill.

HB 400

Council supported this bill to require notification to a municipality by the state or county at least 24 hours in advance of any spraying of pesticides to control mosquitoes.

residences did not suffer any damage beyond a few broken windows, crushed gutters and a smashed shed. He commented that the damage caused by "a storm like this takes a week or more to clean up." Storm damage occurred in other areas of Greenbelt as well, including window shutters blown off buildings and shingles blown off roofs in Charlestowne Village on Lakecrest Drive.

At the Monday evening council meeting, City Manager Nicole Ard summarized the city's involvement in cleaning up after the storm. She said that city crews had to remove fallen trees obstructing Northway, and that one tree had even fallen while the crew was working, almost striking a worker. Clean-up work was also needed on Mandan and Ridge Roads. Ard also reported on a storm-related fire and a tree branch falling on a parked car. She was not aware of significant damage to any homes. Mayor Emmett Jordan said he was impressed with how quickly city crews had removed fallen trees and branches.

Councilmember Judith Davis took note of the incident in which a falling tree almost struck a city worker. She said that Public Works employees were truly first responders along with police officers and firefighters. She was glad that the Greenbelt American Legion was now also giving Public Works crewmembers recognition.

Jim Giese, Stan Zirkin and Amy Hansen also contributed to this article.

Trees and newspaper boxes fell in the March 2 windstorm.

Assault
February 21, 9:19 p.m., 5900 block Springhill Drive. A 54-year-old Greenbelt man was arrested and charged with first degree assault and possession of a handgun when he and another person were engaged in a verbal altercation in a residence. MUSICAL continued from page 1 an “appreciation of the progressive history that founded Greenbelt and that persists to this day.” In Time Will Tell, along with hopeful romances, the youth tackle issues of gender stereotypes and gender equality: Is it okay for a man to like dancing? Why are men presented as helpless in the kitchen? Can a woman be president? The teens grapple with these questions and more in Cherry’s deft, light-handed script.

The 1937-era young people are creative, full of ideals and hopeful about their contributions to the world – much like the actors who portray them. Finlay McNabb reprises his role from last year’s Winter Musical, that of absolute show stealer. McNabb’s portrayal of J.J. Shanahan, a young man who loves to bake and who cooks for his six younger siblings, is compelling: J.J. is warm and engaging. McNabb hits just the right number of laughs in his deliveries and his facial expressions are a joy to watch.

McNabb is not the only actor who lights up the stage with facial expressions. Julian Pitts as a lovelorn Charles gives the object of his affection – and the audience – hilarious smoldering glances on the advice of J.J., who promises Charles that women love the “smoldering musical genius look.” The audience on Saturday evening certainly did.

One of the main characters, Tommy Martin, played by Aidan Larkin, explains that he wants to be a director. He wants to “use theater to inspire people, to unite communities,” he tells Sally, the multi-talented Elta Goldstein. One could imagine Cherry saying the same thing. Musical Director Stefan Brodd noted that the participants in the Winter Musical never ridicule each other; rather they encourage each other and create a space in which it is “safe to try new things.” He continued, “I hope they see that kind of community is possible, and that they can create that in other places. We hope it spreads out and out from here.” Cherry agrees. The community created by the actors in the Youth Winter Musical “allows kids to be more expressive, more creative, take risks and provide that sort of support for each other,” he said.

The supportive community was evident in the performances given. The youth are a talented bunch, to be sure: ensemble member and featured dancer Mecca Lartigue lights up the stage in her scenes and Alyssa Heintzelman, Grace D’Eustachio, Colette Cheng and Vanessa Daelemans are particularly notable among a strong group of singers. Yet the joyful and riveting performances given were not due to talent alone – clearly the performers were having a wonderful time on stage and that joy infected the audience, too.

The songs woven throughout the story are hits from the era, including The Lady is a Tramp (with a line re-written as “I love rowing on the new Greenbelt Lake”), Our Love is Here to Stay and Slap That Bass. Two particular dance stand-outs, both choreographed by present-day high school senior Elizabeth Gardner, were the highly entertaining The Big Apple and Sprockets and Gears, a simplified version of a dance originally choreographed by Ted Shawn in 1934.

Near the end of the musical the action switches back to present day. One of the characters describes the 1937 students as “so optimistic and progressive and committed to their futures.” It is 80 years later and if the performers of the Youth Winter Musical are any indication, that description of young people remains powerfully true today. There is hope, we are reminded. Here stand the leaders of tomorrow.

The Youth Winter Musical continues with shows at 2 and 7 p.m. on Saturday, March 10 in the Community Center, which in 1937 was the new city’s school, Center School. All performances for this show were sold out before opening night.

were attached to the roof of each car which would be as feasible as someone opening a mule breeding farm. (Mules are sterile for those who didn't know.)

Snyder promises that the train will make no noise or vibrations and will travel like the wind. Wind is that stuff that makes our houses vibrate during violent storms. As reported in this paper, properties near the Metro suffer from both noise and vibration, and there is no current evidence that these would not occur here. It's not just these issues that are serious concerns. Not one of us wants a train running under our homes, the special place where we live with our families. Just imagine batteries exploding and causing fires on the train, as they currently are on airplanes.

Someone asked about the disposal of dirt removed from the tunnels. Most of our East Coast, including Prince George's County, was once under the Atlantic Ocean millions of years ago. Anyone who gardens here knows that without cow manure and compost, crops would not grow in our depleted soil. Any dirt removed from the tunnel would be a thick mass of toxic clay that no state would accept. Where it was dumped, rainwater would wash the ancient toxins into streams and rivers, creating another environmental problem.

Anyone who runs a household knows that it's often better to make do with what you have. By using public and private funds the Amtrak system could be improved and more cars added. European-style solar powered buses would truly be green ways to travel. It is important that all of us continue the fight to stop the maglev train.

Governor Hogan is a moderate Republican running for reelection in a blue state. He is the linchpin to stop the train. Each day his office needs to be flooded with calls, tweets, emails, letters, petitions, carrier pigeons and rallies to urge him to keep this unwanted, unneeded nuisance out of our city and county. Just like the sugar-coated tax bill passed last year, this train will only enrich those who own the train. Those of us who were hoodwinked into accepting it will simply have a lot more than moles in our yards.

A Review

Angel Street, Now On at GAC: More Demonic Than Angelic

by Jim Link

Seeing Angel Street, the murder mystery and suspense drama now at the Greenbelt Arts Center (GAC), is a richly fulfilling experience but also a weirdly binocular one. Through one lens we see the play, known to American audiences as Gaslight, as a sophisticated Victorian period piece set in 1880 on Angel Street in London. The fiendish John Manningham, played by the smooth, convincing Michael Fisher, gaslights his wife Bella with an elaborate array of deceptions and maneuvers to convince her she is losing her mind. Susan Harper is wonderful as the vulnerable, vacillating and intimidated Bella, whose mother died insane, making her all the more susceptible. With Bella committed to an asylum, the abusive hubby can seize the cache of jewels hidden somewhere “on the top floor,” where Bella is forbidden to go.

Modulating his tactics by purring, bullying, petting and shouting, Manningham is on the brink of success when Inspector Rough intervenes. Jeffrey Landou is the affable, optimistic, ratiocinative detective – think Sherlock Holmes lite – who induces Bella to conspire with him in betraying her traitorous husband. His shared flask of scotch nudges their conspiracy along.

Add the excellent Alison Starr as the saucy housemaid, Nancy, whose prim exterior belies her pliant true self with an eye for the main chance, and you can recall the parallel trio of Charles Boyer abusing Ingrid Bergman with Angela Lansbury hovering peripherally in Gaslight (1944). Joseph Cotten roughly approximated Inspector Rough. The uniformly-skilled cast is rounded out by Ruth Vernet as Elizabeth, the housekeeper, and her husband, Frank Vernet, as the very necessary Constable. After all “without the Constable, there is no conclusion to the story,” says Frank.

Pauline Griller-Mitchell (director/co-producer/set designer) and Malca Giblin (co-producer, assistant director/set designer/dressing, hair and makeup) have “conspired” again (e.g. Habeas Corpus and Enchanted April at GAC) to assemble a talented cast with great chemistry. Tom Gill and Steven Deming light up and dim those flickering gaslights beautifully and the sound designer Dennis Giblin gives us appropriately ominous music. Linda Swann deserves a special kudo for her authentic Victorian costume design. Those waistcoats, elegant scarves, puffy dress sleeves, cinched waists and high collars are very impressive.

It is a delicious irony that Susan Harper is a psychotherapist by day, whose clients sometimes struggle with the same issues as the gaslighted wife. Which brings me to the second lens of my metaphorical binoculars. Playwright Patrick Hamilton could not have known that when he wrote Angel Street in 1938, it would resonate eerily 80 years later with our surreal social landscape.

Angel Street is at GAC on Fridays and Saturdays, March 9, 10, 16, 17, 23 and 24 at 8 p.m. with Sunday matinees on March 11 and 18 at 2 p.m.

Local Author’s New Book Explores U.S. Route 1

by Karen Yoho

Greenbelter Aaron Marcavitch has pulled together a rich collection of photographs from the National Archives, Bureau of Public Roads collection, regional historical societies and the Library of Congress to tell the story of America’s Main Street. U.S. Route 1: Baltimore to Washington, D.C., his soon-to-be published book, explores this link between the cities of Baltimore and Washington. A historically important artery of transportation, this road has seen three centuries of transportation, communication and community development – residential and commercial. From the earliest ships in Elkridge and Bladensburg to modern automobile-dependent communities, Route 1 has been a vital part of this history.

On March 18 at 2 p.m., Marcavitch will be speaking about the book at Berwyn Heights Town Center as part of an occasional lectures series hosted by the Berwyn Heights Historical Committee. A book launch will be held in April with more details at marylandmilestones.org. Book sales locations can also be found there as they are announced.

The book, published by Arcadia Publishing and The History Press, will be released on March 12.

Greenbelt News Review Reaches Record Elevation

by Cathie Meetre

Greenbelters Rick Meetre, Jerry Bonnell and Cathy Abbott take the News Review to new heights.

Greenbelters Jerry Bonnell, Cathy Abbott, and Rick and Cathie Meetre rode the ski lift in Breckenridge, Colo., to take a copy of the Greenbelt News Review to its highest level yet. High above the tree line at 12,840 feet, the temperature was below zero and the wind howling, but it seemed like a good idea at the time. The group thought perhaps it would set a record and challenge others to take the paper to new climes, new heights and new places. Move over, Flat Stanley.

Skiing down was along an open ridge, from which all the snow had blown away to leave an icy and treacherous surface. But everybody skied down safely and more or less under control. Sometimes quite a bit less.
